

Instructional Design and Instructional Strategies

Directions: Read each statement below and decide if you agree or disagree. Put an “A” by statements that you agree with and put a “D” by statements you disagree with.

- I always have to use an “approved” instructional strategy.
- One strategy will work for every student in my class.
- One strategy will work for every situation.
- When using a lesson plan design, I have to use every section/part of the design.
- I should know what the outcomes are before planning the lesson.
- I should know how I am going to assess before planning the lesson.
- If I write a lesson plan I need to stick to it.
- The standards are a good guideline for what I should be teaching.
- Using an umbrella concept (a supra-concept) can help unite and illuminate the curricular concepts that I am teaching.
- Using reflective practices can help me plan better lessons. These same practices can be useful to students to see what and how they are learning.
- Everyone needs to be at the same place at the same time in a lesson design.
- I should keep the design (plan) to myself, because if I tell the students they will work ahead.
